

THE LATE MR. JOHN G. DOBBIE.

EX-VICE PRESIDENT,
INSTITUTE OF MARINE ENGINEERS.

THE death of John G. Dobbie at Tighnabruaich, Kyles of Bute, on October 21st, was received with surprised regret by a large number of marine engineers and others who have been more or less closely associated with him for many years in India and on the Clyde. He served his apprenticeship as an engineer with Messrs. Simons, Renfrew, and afterwards joined the service of the British India Steam Navigation Company as a marine engineer in 1872, and after holding appointments in the various grades to chief engineer, he was selected for the position of Assistant Superintendent at Calcutta about 1876. About thirty-two months later he was appointed Superintendent at Bombay. After serving in that capacity for about eighteen months he came home on leave. Returning to Bombay he remained there till about 1886, when he was transferred to Calcutta, where he remained as Engine Superintendent of the British India Company till 1898, when he came home and took up the duties of Resident Superintendent at Glasgow. Previous to leaving India Mr. Dobbie suffered considerably from insomnia, which he attributed to shock due to his experience while the earthquake vibration was felt in Calcutta about twelve years ago. Although somewhat ailing for some weeks previous to the fatal issue, the end was unexpected by his relatives and friends. To his widow and family we offer our respectful sympathy and regrets, as we bear in our memory kindly thoughts of past associations with him who is gone. Mr. Dobbie was elected a member of the Institute of Marine Engineers in 1890, and has been a Vice-President for several years. During his residence in India and at Glasgow he was held in much respect by those who were associated with him, unassuming in disposition, firm in his conviction of what is right and true.
